On release, the game received positive reviews, with critics praising the gunplay, the story, the gameplay, and the graphics. The game was the ninth-best selling title in the United States in its first week of release. Gameplay Max Payne 3 is a third-person shooter game. Players control Max through the game's storyline, which takes place over the course of two days, while he fights his way through the game's five campaign missions. Players are able to use weapons such as machine guns, shotguns, and pistols as well as grenades and an array of melee weapons. Multiplayer modes include Deathmatch, Team Deathmatch, Deathtrap, and Score Attack. Players can also switch weapons, deploy grenades, and use air-suppression weapons. Players' actions and behavior in the game are determined through dialog and the story-driven cutscenes. Plot Max Payne 3 continues the storyline of the first two games, taking place on the day of the character's murder and the day after. Max and his family are traveling in New York City when they are ambushed by a drug dealer named Norman, who ambushes Max's family and shoots him. Max is mortally wounded. In the days following the event, Max's wife and son are held captive by Norman, and, after Max is rescued by an American soldier, he is returned to the United States under heavy guard, to an undisclosed location. Max is examined by an unnamed doctor who performs surgery to remove the bullet from Max's head. The doctor announces that he was unable to save Max's eyesight, but that Max will be able to use a hearing aid and that, with effort, he can recover his sight. The doctor also makes the observation that Max is exhibiting advanced Parkinson's-like symptoms, which he warns Max will worsen with time, and Max must learn to cope with them. Max is then returned to his prison cell. In the prison, Max meets a man named Javier Bardem, who works in the facility's library, and they get to know each other as they discuss the events of the previous day. Javier goes on to suggest that Max view a video that he has made, to which Max agrees. He then states that he needs to use the toilet. When Max exits the cell, he witnesses Javier being arrested by two guards. As the guards prepare to take Javier away, Max manages to make his way into the library, where he uncovers a desk with a computer on it. After disabling the guards'
